

This month many letters were unexpectedly received from those who were against the interference of the spiritual manifestation of Noriko Tsuchida, so all the other features of this publication are being shortened or omitted in order to print as many of these letters as possible. Also, those articles which are most important in terms of their content are being given priority, so we were given no choice but to shorten this message which I had promised.

In the spiritual phenomenon in Koriyama, Japan, Miss Tsuchida spoke rapidly because she was concerned about the lack of time, and I had also instructed her to speak fast to prove that her words were not those she had memorized. Therefore, the recording of her voice with all the static noises turned out to be incomprehensible when played back on the machine because she was speaking so fast. Also, the echo of her voice caused feedback between the tape and the mike to make it impossible to make out what she was saying.

For this reason, we had this phenomenon recorded on paper, and I personally filled in and corrected those parts where the expressions were not clear, or where the explanations were insufficient. Just like yourselves, we angels are very busy and we go straight to the location where the spiritual phenomenon is to take place, just before it is time. Thus we do not have the time to prepare our message in advance, so the wording does not come out as good as in other dictated messages or automatic writing where we have the time to prepare our statement.

The message I was trying to convey in Koriyama is about something I always feel to be lacking in the reports about meetings of the True Law, and this is mutual love and a feeling of closeness. I saw that the hearts of many followers of the True

Law were not filled with love, and that they were not exactly firm in their convictions. They only seemed to have a sense of justice and faith in Heaven, but to otherwise vacillate between faith and doubt. Somehow this seems very mysterious to me.

If these people lived in a way that does not shame their conscience, their hearts should be light and carefree. This happy state of mind should easily be converted into trust and love for others. No matter how righteous a person may be, if one does not communicate love, it would be similar to the parable told by Saint Paul where "faith without love is like trying to make a sound with just one cymbal."

Is your heart darkened by the evils of this world? Do cold words weigh heavy on you and make you weary? These are especially the times when followers of the True Law must comfort and encourage one another with brotherly love. Unless you are able to know that you are all walking together along the same path, and are comforted and gain courage from this, you cannot be connected with Heaven.

The meeting of the True Law is not a gathering of enemies. This point about love also applies to those who are just readers of this magazine. If you have the desire to read these publications because you were touched by them, and you continue to read because you sympathize and agree with our message, you should respond with words of love when another reader contacts you. Those who reply with cold words are not those who are righteous before God as Miss Chino stated in the very first issue. These people can only be regarded as people who never read the first issue of this magazine.

This also happens because these people have not realized the truth in the words of Heaven that are written in the Bible which say that when people become connected to Heaven, they connect with love for God and mankind, so that each time they see God within a person they can connect with Heaven. Please carefully think once more about the deep relationship between God and man and love. You should reflect on whether you have ever regretted failing to convey your love to just one tiny bird or a little baby, so that you may correct your behavior from now on.
