

Kindness and Excessive Compassion

Raphael

Today I wish to teach you the difference between kindness and being "overly compassionate." The emotion of compassion seems very difficult to set standards for in terms of the Right View and Right Thinking of the True Law. Pouring compassion on someone who does not deserve compassion is an example of being "overly compassionate." This applies to those lawyers who give legal defense to leftist students who have killed and injured innocent people by their terrorist activities, and go as far as winning their acquittal. This refers to those lawyers and judges who have become almost devilish in the act of giving compassion and forgiveness to those who have committed blatantly evil acts. Such leniency does not count as "kindness" because it only serves to abet evil deeds. This also applies to mothers who, by their doting love, unknowingly give cooperation to their delinquent children who commit crimes, and expose themselves in shame to the public by raising their children up to become hardened criminals who fail to mend their ways.

Then, what form does the expression of "true kindness and compassion" take? In the field of law this is like "taking the extenuating circumstances into consideration" in legal judgements. Love for humanity brings such sentiments. This can be likened to the "rain of compassion" which moves one's heart. Those who do not know what love is, and those who do not know how to love others, do not understand sentiments like the "rain of compassion." Not having this understanding is like not having any gauge by which to formally judge how there are limits to certain things, and compassion from this level, if anything, may be compared to a feeling of wanting to save someone who is drowning.

Those who realize through taking care of animals that, unlike human beings, animals almost never demand something unreasonable, and like babies they largely demand only those things which are necessary for their survival, are people with kind hearts. These are individuals who know what love and compassion really are. This same understanding provides a standard for judgement. Compassion is exactly the same in the case of human beings. When a person is in dire straits and seeks help to save his life or to stay afloat economically, it is truly loving and compassionate to extend a helping hand.

Of course, those communists and socialists who try to start pension systems for those who already have more than they need, or liberals who make big efforts only for promoting social welfare to thereby weaken the local and national government, are devilish individuals who are "overly compassionate." Lawless people with evil schemes and those who plot to destroy our country—these are individuals with ideologies which should not be imitated by followers of the True Law.

Recently a French singer by the name of Claude Boliron is reputed to have developed some psychic powers, it is said that a spirit appeared to him in the form of an alien which arrived in a UFO. Given all the popular interest in UFOs, foolish individuals have come to have faith and follow this man, praising him as a prophet next in importance to Buddha and Jesus Christ. Despite their claims that they are scientific because they investigate UFOs, his teachings are no different than those offered by spiritualists in many new religions, and they are shallow, unscientific and thoroughly nonsensical. It is hard to understand the trend these days where a person like Boliron using nothing more than a symbol like the Star of David (this can be considered as the symbol of Satan Davide) is heralded as a savior, or a great prophet.

Could this spirit be the deceased soul of Israel? Or is it an evil spirit of a Jewish communist who aids the activities of the left wing? Fortunately, we know Boliron's address because it is printed in the back of his book. As soon as we have the time we will gladly go to where he lives and exterminate this evil spirit.

Also concerning the evil spirit that possessed a certain psychic in the suburbs of San Francisco and delivered false messages from Heaven for eight years under the name Michael, the address of this individual is presently being sought, and as soon as we find out we shall destroy this evil spirit. All the evil spirits which damage the authority of Heaven must be harshly sentenced, and this is what is being done. Foolish individuals choose false Heavens because of their own selfish desires, but the real Heaven is not so tolerant as to let these advocates of false Heavens go free.
