

Spirits and the Followers of the True Law

Michael the Great

This month I would like to deliver the message once again. There still seems to be many among you who give priority to your interests in spiritualism over taking a serious look at the world situation today and thinking over what can be done. Typically among the followers of the True Law, the women secretly hope for a spiritual experience similar to the one Miss Yuko Chino had so that they may receive a mission from Heaven equal or greater than hers, while the men, regardless of their age, are unable to rid themselves of the notion that psychic powers are bestowed according to one's level of realization. Therefore, these people continue to be deceived by the same tricks of evil spirits, and are either reprimanded or receive demotions from us in their ranking in the True Law group. In the very worst case, people betray Heaven and are handed eternal death sentences. Such cases continue to come up.

This is much worse than when people outside of our group view the True Law as just another religion and go around maligning it as a false religion. Such indiscretion on the part of members causes the work of spreading the True Law to be hindered. Nothing constructive such as ideas for leading a better life, or for personal growth and self-improvement comes from such internal conflict.

The teaching that the True Law should not be viewed as a religion applies both to people inside the group as well as to those outside of the group. As long as you continue hoping for the occurrence of miracles from Heaven and for good fortune to come your way without making any effort, your spirit of independence will never be developed. With such an attitude, one will never be able to acquire even the strength, wisdom, or judgement of people of the world who just live without relying whatsoever on religious things.

Can this be the right attitude for one who calls us "Father in Heaven," and hopes to feel love and a special relationship to us, and to receive our love in return? Besides those unwise members of the True Law group, those of us in Heaven since the time of the Exodus of Moses with the tribe of Israel through the birth of Christ and onward have extended a loving hand and have spoken words of salvation countless times, and have shed bitter tears over the empty hearts of men. Finally we have come to the conclusion that Children of God who are forever unable to grow spiritually and are only able to repeat the same mistakes, will never be able to find their true selves unless they are rejected, just like the fallen angels.

This does not mean that you should hand your soul over to the devil. We want you to grow and develop a character worthy as a Child of God, who brings joy to your Father in Heaven. We want you to realize through your own suffering and efforts, the right way to live as a human being and what you must do, as well as what the human race should do at this point in time. We hope that you soon come to realize that this is only the average level of human development expected of an individual for becoming a normal member of society, and that without this development, a world for the sake of the happiness of all mankind will never come to pass.

I have told you from the beginning in "The Door to Heaven" that it is not necessary for you to have anything to do with the world of evil spirits or to fight them, and that you do not possess the power necessary for doing this. A human being fighting evil spirits is like fighting images projected on a movie screen, and the only thing that is damaged in this case is the screen or the wall on which the image is projected. All evil spirits are able to do is to project empty images like phantoms on some physical object in the third dimension, or otherwise to stimulate your retina to create an image in your mind. The fact that good spirits also can only act on you in this manner is as I have already explained in detail in previous messages, and I assumed that you readers understand this. The outcome of human beings struggling with spirits is always wretched because it is just like Don Quixote fighting the windmill.

When we say you must not give in to evil, or you must not lose the fight with evil spirits, we mean that you must not let your mind be manipulated by others (evil spirits) to behave foolishly. If you actually attempt to fight with an entity that is like air, you will just appear insane to others. There is nothing more foolish than to fight with an apparition which others cannot see. I want you to be adult enough to view these things calmly and to use your own reasoning. It is from this desire that I revealed all the facts about spirits to you.

In this connection, I stated that if there was a case of possession you should ask us through Miss Yuko Chino to exorcise the spirit, as many time as is necessary. The reason is that only those of us in Heaven have the power to exorcise spirits. I have stated before that only Heaven could be relied on to exorcise spirits. I decided to reiterate these things which I have already explained on many occasions because I learned that there were quite a few superficial followers of the True Law in addition to those readers who only have a shallow understanding about spirits and the True Law.

Common sense for a civilized person means to use one's reason and to deal with situations by viewing matters from a scientific and rational perspective. How often have we taught you that this is totally different from blind faith and superstition, and that this is far removed from the traits of fanatical personalities? Nevertheless, perhaps it cannot be helped that because the present educational system in Japan does not foster reason and scientific attitudes, many of the followers of the True Law who grew up in this environment cannot get beyond the bounds of superstition just like communists and the religious bent in older people. Even though this may be, in part, due to the havoc wreaked by the left wing Japan Teachers Union, between parents who lacked the wisdom to correct the Japan Teachers Union, and the brainwashing of the crafty mass media, the children of youth of Japan must have already fallen victim to socialism even while living in a free country.

The system of democratic government is obligated to defend the rights of educational, political, religious and cultural organizations with mistaken ideologies in the hollow name of democracy, all the while knowing that these organizations are nothing but a liability to the country. Although this provides a free environment for the competition of ideas and the freedom to develop one's character as one sees fit, we cannot suppress doubts which rise up within us concerning the merits of such a system, and lately we are becoming very concerned about this.
